The Witness

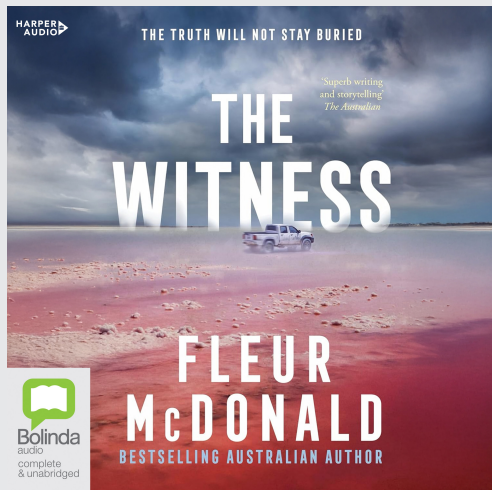

Fleur McDonald

In the middle of Missing Persons Week, teenager Max Galbraith disappears after a party at the two-up ring on the outskirts of Kalgoorlie. With hundred-year-old mine shafts hidden in the area, no one can be sure whether he got lost while under the influence of drugs or if something more sinister has happened.

Lily Carter, a talkshow radio host, receives information about Brendan Cook, another Kalgoorlie teenager who disappeared in similar circumstances the year before. But the police didn't launch a full-scale search for Brendan. Why not?

Enter Detective Angie Sullivan, new to Kalgoorlie and yet to understand how the town works. With no clear links between the two cases, and Lily accusing the police of incompetence, the town is tipped into uproar. What secrets are hiding out there in the bush? And can Angie discover them before any more kids go missing?

Son of Nobody

Yann Martel

Harlow Donne has sacrificed his life to the study of the classical world. So when he is invited to Oxford University to work on an obscure collection of papyrus fragments, he leaves his daughter and wife behind in Canada. In the Bodleian Library he unearths an obscure poem he calls the Psoad, a little known account of the Trojan War and a glimpse into the founding of Western civilisation itself, written by a commoner identified only as Psoas, the son of nobody.

As sole translator and author of The Psoad, Harlow dedicates the poem and its footnotes to his daughter Helen, allowing the text to share a personal message with his beloved child. Despite the 2000-year gap between the ancient Greeks into the present day, one thread hasn't frayed: the universal song of homesickness and regret, of ambition, love and grief.

Asako Yuzuki

Eriko really wouldn't mind being savaged, if it was her best friend doing the savaging ...

Eriko's life appears perfect – devoted parents, a spotless apartment and a job in the seafood division of one of Japan's largest trading companies. Her latest project, to reintroduce the controversial Nile perch fish into the Japanese market, is characteristically ambitious. But beneath her flawless surface she is wracked by loneliness.

Eriko becomes fascinated with a popular blog written by a housewife, Shoko. Shoko's posts about eating convenience-store food and her untidy home are the opposite of the typical Japanese housewife's manicured lifestyle. When Eriko tracks Shoko down at her favourite restaurant and befriends her, Shoko is at first charmed by her new companion. But as Eriko's obsession with Shoko deepens, her increasingly possessive behaviour starts to make Shoko suspicious ...

The Unlikely Doctor

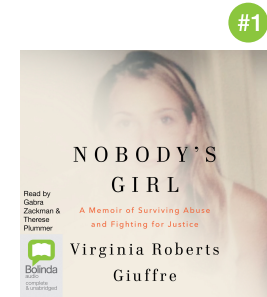

From Gang Life and Prison to Becoming a Doctor at 56 – the Incredible Story of Dr Timoti Te Moke
Dr Timoti Te Moke

After an early start as a bright boy, nurtured by his reo Māori-speaking grandparents, Timoti Te Moke's life changed sharply when his mother took custody of him. His life was from then on marked by abuse, state care and gangs.

By 14, he was behind bars. By 20, he'd moved to Australia, trying to leave his past behind. But a glimpse of blue sky from a prison cell sparked a life-altering question: what if this isn't all there is?

With grit, Timoti then transformed his life. He returned to Aotearoa, became a paramedic and, after facing racism and an unsupported manslaughter charge that nearly derailed his life, became a medical student in his 50s. Timoti is now a fully qualified doctor – proof that brilliance can come from anywhere, and that our society must change to allow it.

Ellen Savage and the Heroes of AHS Centaur

Grantlee Kieza

Few disasters have touched Australia as profoundly as the sinking of the hospital ship Centaur – a deadly wartime attack which killed 268 souls on a mission of mercy.

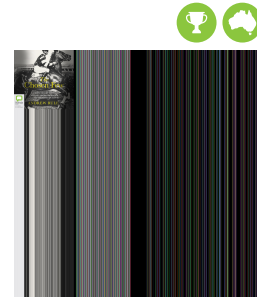

Before dawn on 14 May 1943, the Centaur was cruising north from Sydney with a load of wounded troops, brightly lit to display the bright red hospital crosses painted on its sides.

But off the coast of Brisbane, a Japanese submarine commander fired a torpedo into the Centaur's heart. The ship sank in three minutes, claiming the lives of most on board.

Nurse Ellen Savage was the only woman to survive. For more than 34 hours, she and other heroes fought off sharks and helped the injured until rescuers arrived, winning the George Medal for her bravery.

The discovery of the Centaur's wreckage 66 years later brought this story of hope and heroism full circle.

A Memoir of Surviving Abuse and Fighting for Justice

Virginia Roberts
Giuffre

Daughter. Prisoner. Survivor. Warrior. Nobody's Girl. This is Virginia Roberts Giuffre's last word.

In 2011, Virginia Roberts Giuffre hit the headlines as Jeffrey Epstein and Ghislaine Maxwell's most outspoken victim – the woman whose decision to speak out helped send both serial abusers to prison and whose photograph with Prince Andrew catalysed his fall from grace. She became known as a voice of courage and resilience for women everywhere. This is her story, in her own words. It demonstrates with extraordinary power that victims are made, not born. And that once you come to truly understand the horrifying impact of abuse, you will never again question why a victim stays, or returns over and over again.

In April 2025, Giuffre took her own life. She left behind a memoir written in the years preceding her death and stated unequivocally that she wanted it published. This is the powerful story of an ordinary girl who would grow up to confront adversity and trauma of the darkest form, yet found the strength to move forwards, reclaim her voice and shine a light on evil.

'Nobody's Girl' is not just a memoir – it's a template for how difficult it is for victims who have been abused once to escape the cycle.'
