Arson at the Art Gallery

A Getaway Bay Mystery #1
Catherine Lee

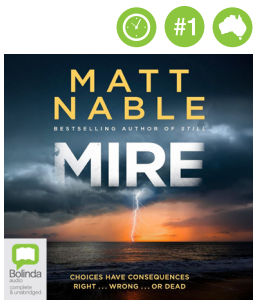

Her new life wasn't supposed to begin with a murder ...

Widow Addison Lake needs to laugh again. To live again. Moving to Getaway Bay and fixing up the rundown beach house into a bed and breakfast should be just the ticket. But the dream of a fresh start quickly becomes a nightmare when her cousin's art gallery catches fire – and a body is found in the ashes.

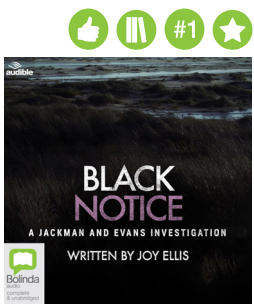

The bristly local detective needs an arrest, and Addison must act fast to prove her cousin's innocence. But between the beach house renovations, an ailing uncle, an over-protective daughter and the quirky inhabitants of Getaway Bay, she has her work cut out.

Can Addison and her new friends uncover the real culprit before her cousin is charged with murder?

The Things We Never Say

Elizabeth Strout

Artie Dam is a man with a secret. He spends his days teaching history to high schoolers, expanding their young minds, correcting their casual cruelties and lending a kind word to those who need it most. He goes to holiday parties with his wife, makes small talk with neighbours, and, on weekends, takes his sailboat out on the beautiful Massachusetts Bay. He is, by all appearances, present and alive. But inside, Artie is plagued by feelings of isolation. He looks out at a world gone mad – at himself and the people around him – and turns a question over and over in his mind: how is it that we know so little about one another, even those closest to us?

And then, one day, Artie learns that life has been keeping a secret from him. Once he learns it, he is forced to chart a new course, to reconsider the relationships he holds most dear – and to make peace with the mysteries at the heart of our existence.

After a series of Mr Wrongs, Bee has finally found her Mr Right – William is everything she's been looking for.

Gertrude is Bee's best friend since forever. She's happy for Bee – just as she's been sad for Bee during those romantic missteps, and supportive of Bee in everything else.

Panicked to realise she's not the main character in her own life, Gertrude turns to William's best friend, Arthur. He isn't the obvious choice for life coaching – apart from anything else, She doesn't really like him – but there is no one else. Just Bee.

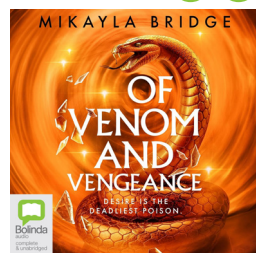

Arthur's mission is to find out whether there's more to Gertrude than she thinks, and if so, what it is. The problem is, that might throw up some hard questions – about her life, her choices and above all, her friendship with Bee.

John OF John DOUGLAS STUART

A NOVEL

Out of money and with little to show for his art school education, John-Calum Macleod takes the ferry home to the island of Harris to find that not much has changed except for him. In the windswept croft where he grew up, Cal resumes his old life, caught between the two poles of his childhood: his father John, a sheep farmer, weaver and pillar of their local Presbyterian church, and his Glaswegian grandmother Ella, who has kept a faltering peace with her son-in-law for decades.

While Cal wonders if any lonely men might be found on the barren hillsides of home, John is dismayed by his son's long hair and how he seems unwilling to be saved. As the seasons pass, everything is poised to change as the threads holding together the fragile community become increasingly entangled.

'This book is special, it has an urgency, an immediacy, a brilliant sense of place, the drama of fierce emotion repressed, concealed and volcanically exposed.'

— Colm Tóibín, award-winning author of The Magician

'The novel is so immersive, so all-encompassing, that I felt like I was living in it. Douglas Stuart has written something brilliant and rare.'

— Ann Patchett, New York Times bestselling author of Tom Lake

'John of John is a masterpiece.'

Be like the Sea

Life, Learnings and Leadership from an Irish Navy Captain

Marie Gleeson

The one thing you can't fully control in a ship is the water all around you, so part of your plan is always reading and analysing the currents and the tides. You have a clear image in your head of how you think the ship will perform in the prevailing conditions. But this time something isn't going the way we had planned it ...

As a farmer's daughter in the country's largest landlocked county, Marie Gleeson's unusual career choice took her into uncharted waters. Working her way up from gruelling bootcamp training to leading a drug interdiction operation seizing €700 million of cocaine from a yacht off the Kerry coast, she was a leader among men and rose to every challenge. Developing a love of the sea, Gleeson learned that to be at one with it required agility, and a willingness to change, to go with the wind – not against it. These lessons prepared her for operating without a life raft when her personal life threw her the greatest challenge of all ...

We're All Going to Die

Practical Happiness for the Time You Have Left

Ben Pronk

You, me and everyone else who has ever lived, or will ever live, is going to die.

The Stoics knew that tempus fugit ('time flies'). Rather than see this as a bummer, however, they knew that our ever-ticking personal doomsday clocks were actually a brilliant reminder to embrace every second of our lives.

Never forget that you are going to die, and make the most of the short time you have left.

In his insightful, warm and witty audiobook, Ben Pronk reveals the philosophy, science and secrets of true happiness. From exploring the wisdom of Stoicism, Hedonism and other schools of philosophy, to unpacking the details of neuroscience and psychology – all the while throwing in a healthy dose of tough love – Pronk offers enlightenment on what happiness is, how it works and how you can get more of it.

Read by the Author

Ben Pronk is a former Australian Army Special Forces officer, a combat veteran, a corporate crisis management consultant, an international resilience expert, an artist and a passionate philosopher

Dawn O'Porter

What happens at your kitchen table can become the blueprint for everything you are. Did you sit alone or with people you loved? Was it fun or tense? Was someone working hard to stop you noticing someone else's mood?

Did you take it for granted, or know someone had busted their balls to make it happen? Was the food thoughtful and delicious, or bland and functional? Was the plate laid down with love or anger?

It all matters. It all stays with us. I think about this every single day.

For years, Dawn O'Porter thought that fulfilment lived somewhere glamorous: in success, recognition and a life turned up to full volume. Somewhere between grieving loss, learning to cook something vaguely nutritious, Hollywood dreams, raising children, writing bestselling fiction – and occasionally eating Wotsits for dinner – O'Porter discovered that the real spotlight wasn't out there.

It was actually here, in her kitchen, where daily rhythms and chaos, small disappointments and big wins played out, often erupting into a raucous party. Through the meals that nourished, impressed or perhaps sometimes barely registered, food became her stage, where she made sense of life and discovered her love language.

'Funny and heart-rending in equal measure.'

– Sunday Express, on Life in Pieces

'It is very funny but also intimate and honest.'

– Louis Theroux, author of Theroux The Keyhole, on Life in Pieces

Eighteen-year-old Fenella is as mischievous as her freckled elfin beauty and feline green eyes suggest. But beneath that puckish charm, she hides her ardent desire to do all in her power to make her beloved cousin Periquine, Lord Corbury, happy.

When, to her chagrin, the dashing Lord returns from the Napoleonic War after fighting with Wellington, penniless and passionately in love with another – a woman of great wealth and even greater beauty, whom he cannot marry without wealth of his own, Fenella sacrifices her private passion to his wellbeing.

Laying her life and her love on the line, she joins Periquine in a swashbuckling and death-defying life of crime as highwaymen, robbers and smugglers. Will their exploits reap the riches he needs? And will Fenella's all-conquering love remain unrequited?

Only when Periquine faces losing her forever will he find the answer in his heart ...
